The fiday morning while the dew was yet on the grass, Miss McDougal loves siender waist. Before doing so, however, she placed her little lunch basket beside an old tree. This lunch basket, which has for a fasten-ing a dilapidated wicker clasp, contained two boiled eggs, a cruller or two, some cold meat, a paper of salt and bread and butter. The pretty schoolma'am gathered the flowers, placed them in her belt, picked up her lunch basket and
